

Conference Information

KAIRS is hosting an exciting Professional Development conference in 2012 to address the Storms of Learning in today's ever changing educational climate.

Keynote Speaker David Warlick is a much requested education consultant that addresses "teaching and learning in the new information landscape."

David doesn't refer to himself as a "techie," but rather an educator helping to create a new vision for classrooms that will change ideas regarding teaching, curriculum and learning.

About David Warlick

David Warlick is a man with a vision of what 21st Century learning requires.

“Today, the world is a different place. Our sense of the future has changed, our students learn differently, and the very nature of information has changed. Technology has advanced at a rate that would have baffled us when I was growing up. This time of change forces us to ask two fundamental questions. What do children need to be learning today?...and How do they need to be learning it?” – David Warlick.

David Warlick is a 35-year educator. He has been a classroom teacher, district administrator, and staff consultant with the North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction. For the past 15 years, Mr. Warlick has operated The Landmark Project, a consulting and innovations firm in Raleigh, North Carolina.
